PRODUCT DESIGNER — TALLINN, ESTONIA

Dear Bolt Hiring Team,

I'm applying for the Product Designer role in Tallinn. Bolt's mission — making urban mobility more affordable, more sustainable, and simply easier to live with — is the kind of consumer product work I find most meaningful. Everyday-use mobile products in transport are what I've been shipping for the past two years, and I want to keep doing it at Bolt's scale.

At SnappTrip, Iran's online travel and mobility booking platform, I've been Senior Product Designer across flights, buses, and trains. Three outcomes that translate most directly to Bolt:

- A 3X increase in filter conversion rate after I overhauled search and filter UX across transport verticals — the kind of mobile-first discoverability work Bolt's rider and food apps live and die on.
- A 10% conversion uplift from A/B tests on solution cards, iterated with Data and Product in short, measurable cycles.
- A 30% drop in support calls per ticket after I redesigned cancellation and refund flows — the quiet, high-leverage post-trip work that keeps CS costs down and NPS up.

Before SnappTrip I spent two years designing for MintList, an online car-trading platform in Canada — so B2C mobility, two-sided marketplaces, and getting people from "I need to go somewhere" to a confident tap are familiar territory.

I'm based in Tehran and would need Bolt's relocation and visa support to move to Tallinn — I know Bolt offers an advanced relocation package including visa services, flight and temporary housing, and I'm ready to relocate as soon as paperwork allows. Estonia's e-residency culture and Bolt's design maturity are both reasons I want to be there specifically.

Thank you for considering me — I'd love to show you the SnappTrip case studies.

Warm regards,

Farzaneh Abasnezhadford
